

Please do not allow the weakening of Indiana's existing telemarketing law. That law has allowed us to reclaim ownership of our telephones and has made it possible to actually eat dinner without multiple telephone interruptions. Imagine being reasonably certain that any time the phone rings, it's someone you actually want to talk to! With the exception of a few telemarketers, all Indiana citizens will be most upset with any attempt by the FCC to weaken a law that has been immensely popular and successful.
